A Note from the Editor

Please pardon this interruption in what I hope is a perfectly enjoyable summer break. There are a few housekeeping things that I thought warranted a summer bulletin. Expect another one as we get closer to registration, and who knows what may pop up between now and then. Also, keep your eyes alert for snail mail and/or email from the school, as official information should be arriving within the next weeks.

Global Action Through Engagement (GATE) is the place for you. Join high school peers in becoming youth leaders in your community. GATE introduces global issues through interactive simulations, small group learning activities, discussions with speakers and university students, and local service learning projects. Students will develop strong leadership skills in problem-solving and conflict-resolution. The program will also build 21st century skills in cross-cultural communication, critical thinking, digital and media literacy, and how to be competitive in a global marketplace.

In 2013, GATE will focus on the global theme of human security with an emphasis on the impacts of conflict and violence on individuals, families and communities. Students will also explore the way violence and insecurity relate to other global challenges, including poverty, food, health, and the environment. To learn more and to apply, click here.
